The Science Rap!

"Oh, NO! Not a science fair project," moaned Jennifer. "I don't even know where to begin!"

"Well," replied Miss Pflumm, while reaching down inside the knapsack on top of her desk. "I have always felt that the best place to begin is at the beginning." Miss Pflumm then turned her back to the class, all the while continuing to fumble around inside the pack.

"I wonder what she's got in there today," whispered Andy to Greg.

None of them could see what their teacher was doing, but they sure could hear. From the bottom of the orange bag came the distinct beat of RAP MUSIC! Then suddenly Miss Pflumm spun around. She was wearing enormous, round, blue sunglasses and was holding a graduated cylinder in her hand as if it were a microphone.

Okay, so Agnes Pflumm is a little bit different...

What you've just read is an excerpt from my first novel, Agnes Pflumm and the Stonecreek Science Fair. In the pages that follow, the students in the book are astonished to see their new teacher begin to dance and rap. However, each verse of the Science Rap represents a key part of the scientific method of inquiry and discovery that scientists of all ages use—even you! The Science Rap begins with this verse:

In science we look for cause and effect / and follow a method which is most direct.

To learn the rest of the Science Rap and hear the music for it, all you have to do is log onto my website, www.agnespflumm.com, and click on NO FEAR SCIENCE FAIR PROJECTS under Student Resources. Better yet, you can read Agnes Pflumm and the Stonecreek Science Fair yourself. In some schools, entire grade levels have choreographed the Science Rap and performed it live!
